Thursday 8th September 2022 Virtual Conference

A wide range of breast procedures can be delivered safely as a day case. When the Department of Health recommended prioritising day case breast surgery in 2007, emphasis was placed on non-oncological procedures. However, innovation by surgical teams since, has successfully applied a day surgery 'mind-set' to the management of a growing number of oncological procedures, which can release valuable inpatient resource for women who require postoperative monitoring following complex reconstructive surgeries. Despite these benefits, wide variation in day surgery performance persists nationally, usually, as a result of health professional and nursing misperceptions.

The current Covid-19 pandemic has placed unprecedented strain on hospital services, staff and facilities with hospitals having to redesign, pathways and physical spaces, with recommendations on prioritisation of a range of breast surgical procedures. Re-evaluating current breast surgery pathways by asking the question 'why is inpatient admission necessary' can simultaneously address the variation in breast surgery day case rates, which preceded the pandemic and contribute to the recovery of elective surgery in the NHS.

Attendance at this conference, which has been produced by the British Association of Day Surgery, will enable delegates to develop a day case management pathway for breast surgery and potential to improve trust management of breast surgical demand and capacity. The basic elements of a day surgery pathway will be presented including the evaluation of the quality of care provided. Specific details of multi-disciplinary care specific to breast surgery management will be presented by acknowledged experts in the field from a variety of backgrounds, reflecting the importance of the multi-disciplinary team in successful delivery of day surgery care for these patients.

100% of delegates at the last conference on this subject would recommend the conference to a colleague. Comments from delegates at the last event included:

"Thought provoking and challenging especially seeing success in other units"

"Excellent - all the positive data regarding day surgery has challenged my view and will discuss with colleagues how we can move to doing this"
